BATTLE OF NAVARINO.

Some Exciting Incidents of this Fierce Naval Engagement.

In the year 1827 the British admiral, Omanney, took part in the battle of Navarino, in which the English, French and Russian ships entered the harbor of Navarino, in Greece, and annihilated the Turkish and Egyptian vessels, which were unable to leave their moorings. The battle lasted four hours. Admiral Omanney tells this of Sir Edward Codrington, the admiral in command: "His escapes from death were moryclous. So that he might command a good view of the battle he stood on the poop of the Asia, the most exposed part of the ship. He was talking with the master when a shot came and killed the lat-ter at his side. A shot killed an officer of marines who was on the quarter deck just below the poop. The admiral left the poop only once to go forward to talk to the boatswain, and while talking to him the boatswain also was killed at his side.

"A bullet went through his hat, in which it made two holes, and another bullet went through his loose coat sleeve. Another bullet smashed his gold watch. When on the poop he stooped his head under a rolled awning, and while bent like that a shot passed through the awning's folds. At another time he had just turned from a spot on the poop when the place where he had been standing was covered with wreckage from aloft, which would have crush ed and buried him. And yet throughout the battle, when men were being slain and wounded everywhere around him, Codrington escaped uninjured."

Other incidents of the same battle: "An Irishman seized a musket, and, with a roar of Make way, there? he swept a road through the Turks by swinging his weapon from side to side with crushing force. One of my fellow midshipmen, named Hicks, was among the boarders, many of whom had forgetter to take their pistols. Hicks shouted to the first lieutenant. Give them cold shot, sir!' And the boarders did, for they picked up the cold shot which was lying about ready for the guns and hurled it down upon the Turks."

His Reference.

In the course of a conversation between two men at the club last might one of them jokingly remarked that a man with a "cheek" could get anything he desired, and he backed up his statement with the following story:

One of his friends, a merchant, had advertised for a porter. A big, burly Irishman applied for the job After looking him over the merchant was satisfied with his appearance. The only objection was the quer in of references, and the Irishd not seem to have a yery good one. "Can you get no better reference than this?" asked the mer-"Oh, yis, sor. I kin git ye the very best kind of a wan if that's all ye want, sor, and I don't have to go far for it either. Me father and me mother, sor, live down the sthrate, and they've known me all melife."

And he landed the job. — New York Times.

His Only Magic.

The old story of the Irishman who, when he was asked how he played upon the fiddle, answered, "Be main strength, be jabers!" is outdone by the answer of a celebrated violinist to a lady who asked him the same question.

"Oh, signor!" exclaimed the fash-ionably dressed lady, with a gushing air. "By what magic do you evoke such divine strains from your vio-

Artificial Snow.

A curious instance of the formation of snow was witnessed at Agen, France. A fire broke out in a sawmill when the temperature was 10 degrees below the freezing point. The water thrown upon it was instantly vaporized and, rising into the cold, dry air, was immediately condensed and fell as snow. What with bright starlight and a strong northwest wind blowing, the whirling snow above and the raging fire below, a brilliant spectacle was pre-

LOST TO THE WORLD.

Hoover's Discovery of the Nature and Cause of Electricity.

The principal of the village academy in Painesville, O., during the fifties of the past century was a Mr. Baldwin Bishop. He was a man whose heart and soul were in his work. He was sure in some unexpected and original way to show his disapproval of any individual in the tion. institution with which he was connected who could justly be called a shirker. There was in one of the classes of which Professor Bishop had charge a lad by the name of Hoover, who had evaded the recitation of his lessons when called upon to take his part, pleading a poor memory. His delinquencies were, however, almost, if not entirely, due to a lack of application, and this the professor more than suspected.

During the week before the school session ended for vacation, examinations, embracing the subjects stud-ied by the pupils during the whole term, took place in the class rooms. During this time it was the custom of the relatives and friends of the students to visit the academy. On the occasion referred to the presence of a number of young lady acquaintances spurred on the boys to do their best.

The subject on which they were expected to show their proficiency was that of natural philosophy. After several members of the class had distinguished themselves more or less creditably in their attempts to explain familiar phenomena Hoover. who had evidently been dreading the ordeal, was suddenly called upon and, in deference to "rule and cus-tom, of time and place," stood up to

"Mr. Hoover," said Professor
Bishop, "will you kindly explain to us the cause and nature of electrici-

The question surprised every one present but Hoover. All questions bearing upon any subject the class was engaged in studying were the same to him.

He colored up and paused, stam-mered and took refuge in his usual formula. "Professor," he said, "I knew the answer to that question before I came to the class, but I have forgotten it." "Are you sure you cannot remember it?" asked his teacher. "Take time and think, sir." Mr. Hoover shook his head.

"No, sir," he said. "I knew it a little while ago, but it has slipped my mind entirely."
"What a pity!" said the professor,

Each to His Trade. Kullack, the famous pianist, was once invited to dinner by a wealthy Berliner, who was the owner of a large boot manufactory and had been a shoemaker in his time. After the repast Kullack was requested to play something, and he consented. Not long afterward the virtuoso invited the boot manufacturer and after dinner handed him a pair of old boots.

"What am I to do with these?" inquired the rich man.

With a genial smile Kullack re-

"Why, the other day you asked me after dinner to make a little music for you, and now I ask you to mend these boots for me. Each to his trade."

A Famous Map.

Interesting discoveries are made now and then by students in the big old libraries. While Baron Nordenskjold was gathering material for his "Atlas of Ancient Cartography" he discovered in the British museum the only known copy of the earliest general map of Germany. This was the famous map of Car-dinal Nicolas of Cues. The map was completed in 1464. This find greatly interested geographers. Mercator's famous mercof Germany was published more than a century after that of the learned cardinal.

An aged lady complained to a London magistrate that because she was a little behind in her rent her landlady followed her to church and asked for it there. The landlady came into a pew slongside of her and when she was joining in the responses was constantly whispering to her about the rent. When it came to the response, "Incline our hearts" the landlady would add, "To pay our rent." The magistrate said that it was very annoying, but there was nothing illegal in it.

It is supposed that the rude approach to the human outline observed in the shape of the head of the dugong, the attitude of the mother in clasping her young to her breast with one flipper while swimming with the other, holding both above the water, and suddenly diving and showing her fish-like tail when alarmed, gave rise to the mermaid myth first told by the Arab seamen. Jules Verne gives a thrilling description of the capture of a dugong in the Red Sea when its flesh was desired as food. Naturalists tell us that the flesh of the manatee or of the dugong much resembles wellfatted pork, of pleasant flavor, and is highly esteemed as food. For this reason they were much hunted and are fast becoming extinct.

He Teld the Truth.

An Irish gentleman had a splendid looking cow, but she kicked so much that it took a very long time and it was almost impossible to milk her, só he sent her to a fair to be sold and told his herdman to be sure not to sell her without letting the buyer know her faults. He brought home a large price which he had got for it. His master was surprised and said, "Are you sure you told all about her?' 'Bedad, I did, sir," said the herdsman. "He asked me whether she was a good milker. 'Begorra, sir,' says I, 'it's you'd be tired milking her.' "-Seventy Years of Irish Life.

He further says that an onion is altertive and a tonic and its nourishing properties are more than double those of the potato.

About Right.

The Buffalo Express tells of a photographer's method in quieting children sitting for their photographs.

A friend of ours took her four-year old girl to a photographer. The child couldn't be made to sit still. He of the camera vainly endeavored to make the little wiggler sit still, and finally said to the desparing mother:

"Madam, if you will leave the little dear alone with me a few minutes I think I can succeed."

The mother dha scarcely withdrawn when she was summoned back by the triumphant photographer, who exhibited a satisfactory negative. When they reached home the mother asked:

"Nellie, what did the man say to you when I left you along with him?" "He theid," lisped Nellie, "thit thtill you little ratheal, or I'll thake you!"

The Elephant's Milk.

A schoolmaster had just finished a lesson on "Food" when a little boy put up his hand. On being asked what he wanted, he replied:

"Please, sir, Jones said he knew a baby that was brought up on elephant's milk and it gained ten pounds n weight every day."

"Jones ought not to tell you such rubbish," said the master; then addressing Jones, he said:

"Tell me whose baby was brought up on elephant's milk."

To which Jones hesitatingly replied: "Please, sir, it was the elephant's baby." -The Tatler.

RIGHT TIME TO CURE CATARRIL.

Evans Pharmacy Guarantee Hyomei Will Cure if Used Now.

The early summer when the weather becomes warm and settled, is the best time of the whole year to treat catarrhal troubles with the expectation of complete and lasting relief,

Everyone who has catarrh, or even tendency to catarrh, should use Hyomei now, for the benefit will be gained twice as quickly and the disease thoroughly eradicated from the system.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs but one dollar, and includes a neat pocket inhaler, a medicine dropper, and sufficient Hyomei for several weeks' treatment. The inhaler lasts a lifetime, and if more Hyomei is needed, extra bottles can be obtained for 50 cents.

In Anderson there are scores of well known people who have been oured of catarrh by Hyomei. If it does not cure you, Evans Pharmacy will return your money. This is the strongest evidence they can offer as to their faith in the remedy.
